

Educational Institute,
An educational institution is a place where people of different ages gain an education. Examples of some institutions are preschools, primary schools, colleges, universities.

Teacher,

A teacher (also called a school teacher or, in some contexts, an educator) is a person who helps others to acquire knowledge, competence or virtue.

Informally the role of teacher may be taken on by anyone (e.g. when showing a colleague how to perform a specific task).

Classroom,
A classroom is a learning space, a room in which both children and adults learn. Classrooms are found in educational institutions of all kinds, ranging from preschools to universities. The classroom provides a space where learning can take place uninterrupted by outside distractions.

Early Childhood Education, When children are young, they are learning sponges. Every new experience, every word they learn, every behavior they adopt, is an investment in a more fruitful future.
You can never have a greater impression on a person than when they are in their early childhood years.

Primary Education, Primary Education is the initial stage of education and has as its basic aim to create, establish and offer opportunities to all children, regardless of age, gender or country of origin, to achieve a balanced cognitive, emotional and psychomotor development.

the possible criminal connection of the heavy men eventually taken her away. These people knew everything and were not slow in discussing it. There was a reserve, self-preservation.

Rosemary had talked about it being natural that people assume she was gay since she was single and had a sister already 'out' with a partner who was a lawyer. Gerrie had talked about her husband's problems coping with drink and violence as if Jack had been prone to getting chest colds in the States. Colm had approached their table with a casual apology over the incident as if it had not been the most excruciatingly embarrassing moment of her life. The two women had told her how they initially thought Ria was mad to go to America and leave her children but they hoped it would all work out for the best.

Marilyn could not take in the degree of involvement and interference that these people felt confident to have in everyone else's life. They thought nothing of discussing the joys and private sorrows of their friends with Marilyn who was after all a complete stranger, here purely because of an accidental home exchange. While she felt sympathy for Ria and all that had happened to her, she also felt a sense of annoyance.

Why had she not kept her dignity, and refused to allow all these people into her life? The only way to cope with tragedy and grief was to refuse to permit it to be articulated and acknowledged. Deny its existence and you had some hope of survival. Marilyn got out of bed and looked down on the messy garden and the other large red brick houses of the neighbourhood. She felt very lost and alone in this place where garrulous people wanted to know everything about you and expected you to need the details of their lives too.

She ached for the cool house and beautiful garden in Westville. If she were there now she could go and swim lengths of her pool safe in the knowledge that no one would call and burden her with post-mortems about last night. Clement the cat who slept on her bed every night woke up and stretched and came over to her hopefully. He was purring loudly. The day was about to begin, he was expecting a game and a bowl of something.

Marilyn looked at him sadly. 'I don't usually talk to animals, Clement, but I'm making an exception in your case. I made the wrong decision coming here. It was the worst decision I ever made in my life.'

CHAPTER SIX

Do you think when we're talking to Granny we should call her Nora?' Brian asked.

'What?' Annie looked up from her book.

'You know ... if we call Bernadette's mother by her first name maybe we should do the same with Granny.' Brian wanted to be fair.

'No, Brian, and shut up,' said Annie.

'You always say shut up, you never say anything nice, not ever at all.'

'Who could say anything nice to you, Brian, honest?'

'Well, some people.'

'Who apart from you're what they'

'Fiona often says.'

'Tell me one name.'

'She said it was command the centre.'

'And had you?'

'I accept that Brian.'

'Well, only by a bit.'

'And they were of course.'

'Brian smiled at them.'

'Sometimes he said you'd feel sorry for them.'

'You'd feel sorry for them.'

'They were going to be a family.'

Secondary Education.
Secondary education typically takes place after six years of primary education and is followed by higher education, vocational education or employment. Like primary education, in most countries secondary education is compulsory, at least until the age of 16.

Higher Education, Higher education is tertiary education leading to award of an academic degree. Higher education, also called post-secondary education, third-level or tertiary education, is an optional final stage of formal learning that occurs after completion of secondary education.

Group Study,

A study group is a small group of people who regularly meet to discuss shared fields of study. These groups can be found in a school or college/university setting, within companies, occasionally primary/junior school and sometimes middle school. Professional advancement organizations also may encourage study groups.
